CONGRESS BUSY IN DIFFERENT PROBES

STEEL TRUST, LORIMER CASE AND CONTROLLER BAY MATTERS BEING CONSIDERED BY COMMITTEES.

HINES NAMES BOUTELL

Former Congressman Now Said to be The Man Who Urged Lorimer's Election.—Wickersham Denies Report.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, D. C., July 24.—Now that the senate has finished its vote on the Canadian Reciprocity treaty, the various probes that are being conducted by special committees named for this purpose, are engrossing the public attention.

Different Cases.

Daily hearing of the Lorimer, the Steel Trust, the Sugar and and the Controller Bay matters are the center of interest and bring into the lime light many figures.

Stephenson Matter.

What will be done with the proposed Stephenson probe remains a problem as yet and the sub-committee will make a report after going over the papers forwarded by the Wisconsin legislature for their consideration. It is probable, however, that nothing will be done at the present session.

President's Message.

It is said that President Taft will send a special message to congress on Wednesday regarding the famous Controller Bay matter in Alaska which now also is being probed by the special committee and in which the famous "Dick to Dick" letters are said to have figured.

The Radicals.

One of the surprising features of the vote on the Canadian reciprocity treaty is that the ranks of the so-called insurgents have become badly split and while for the most part they stood by the extremists some of the leaders voted for the measure and disapprove of the stand taken by the others who practically read themselves out of the republican party.

Lorimer Case.

Edward Hines caused a sensation today by testifying before the Lorimer committee that Representative Boutell, of Illinois, the new minister to Switzerland, told him that President Taft regarded Lorimer as an acceptable candidate and was anxious to have him elected and that he would be glad to assist in his election.

Steel Trust Matters.

At the Steel Trust investigation today Chairman Stanley put on record a copy of the agreement entered into in 1900 by the Steel Plate association, comprising eleven great steel companies. The agreement apportioned the shipments of steel plates and bound members to make sales between the parties of the contract at the pool prices.

Boutell's Letter.

Hines produced a sheet of paper, without letterhead, signature or date and swore it was Boutell's handwriting. The paper follows: "I should like to have the senator know who was the only man in Washington who went to the President in his behalf and bring off the goods."

Explains Details.

Hines declared the senator referred to was Lorimer, and his election was the subject of the note. He said the note was inclosed in another letter from Boutell.

Wickersham's Report.

Attorney General Wickersham today appeared before the house committee on judiciary and denied the charges brought by Delegate Wickersham of Alaska that he had refused to investigate the alleged "grab" of land on Controller Bay, Alaska, by the Guggenheims. He declared the investigation had been an active one.

Sprained Wrist and Slight Bruises Result From Fall of Twenty Feet. Fortunately Escaped Serious Injury.

While at work in the beet sugar factory late Friday William Rhyne narrowly escaped serious injury when he fell about twenty feet to the floor of the building. It seems that the man was knocked from the place where he was standing by a chain and block which became loosened above him and carried him to the floor beneath. He sustained a sprained wrist and more or less serious bruises about the shoulder and a long gash on the side of his head.

EMPLOYERS COMPLY WITH PROVISIONS OF COMPENSATION ACT

Are Taking Steps to Regulate Factories to Receive Benefits From Law Passed by Legislature.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., July 24.—The employers of Wisconsin are taking active steps to accept the benefits of the workmen's compensation act. Judge R. D. Marshall of the state supreme court has filed his election to become subject to the act. The judge has a large farm in Sauk county and is desirious of having his employes protected in case of accident.

Last week a large manufacturing concern at Kenosha, employing upwards of one hundred men filed its election, and several other employers have done likewise. The indications are that a large number of employers will file their elections before the time the defenses are taken away, Sept. 1, 1911.

Word has come to the commission that employers in various parts of the state are taking steps toward organizing mutual insurance companies to protect themselves under the law. The Industrial commission is encouraging this work and will issue a compilation of the insurance laws in reference to mutual companies within a few days.

Many of the large employers of labor propose to carry their own insurance, because under the law, the benefits to be paid to the employes are distributed over a considerable period of time. The benefits are based upon loss of wage and are paid weekly. In case of accident 65 per cent of the loss of wage is paid to the employe until recovery, or in case of permanent injury, until four times his average yearly earnings has been paid. Similar provision is made in case of death, in which case the average wage is figured at not less than $375 a year or more than $750 a year.

The commission is receiving calls for information with reference to the law every day, and is also being sought for addresses in various parts of the state to explain the provisions of the law. One member of the commission will accept these invitations in order to assist the employers in getting a proper understanding of the law.

The commission will also discuss the provisions of the industrial commission law with respect to safety devices and measures for the prevention of accident. It is the desire of the commission to reduce the number of accidents, and this can be done with little expense.

The municipalities are already under the law, and a report of accident has been received from Manitowoc, showing that the city is taking care of the employe satisfactorily.

WILD DISORDER IN HOUSE OF COMMONS OCCURRED TODAY

Refuse to Permit the Premier to Even Read Request of the House Lords.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, July 24.—There were scenes of wild disorder in the House of Commons today when the Premier moved the consideration of the Lords' amendments to the parliamentary bill. Seven times the Premier was howled down amid terrific din.

The Premier finally threatened to "invoke the prerogative of the crown" for the creation of new peers, and the sitting adjourned until tomorrow.

The exact terms of Asquith's ultimatum for the creation of the new peers crowded the house and galleries in a way not seen in many years.

As he rose to speak the Premier was applauded by the radical, Irish and labor benches, but a small group of standpatters chanted "Traitor, traitor." Finally a strong appeal by Speaker Lowther caused a momentary cessation of the tumult and Asquith made a short explanation of the bill.

At the declaration to "invoke prerogative of the crown" the disorder renewed. Asquith's closing remarks were inaudible. As he sat down he received an ovation from his supporters.

GAZETTE WILL HAVE DAILY WEATHER MAP

SPECIAL SERVICE HAS BEEN SECURED FROM MADISON OFFICE OF UNITED STATES WEATHER BUREAU.

HOW IT MAY BE READ

Instructions Which Will Aid In Reading Symbols That Appear On Map.—State of Weather, Temperature and Rainfall.

What will be a most valuable and profitable feature for the Gazette readers will be the daily weather map, the first of which appeared in Saturday's issue. A special forecast for this locality and a general statement of the weather conditions of the entire country will accompany each map.

The map will be received from the Madison office of the United States weather bureau, and is compiled from observations taken at eight o'clock every morning.

Picture of the Weather.

The weather map is a picture of the weather at a particular moment of the day. The map printed in this paper shows the state of the weather at 7 o'clock of the morning of the day the paper is printed. That is to say, 7 o'clock by the clocks used in Madison. In the east the clocks are an hour faster than they are here, so that the observations for the weather map are taken at 8 o'clock by 75th meridian time. To the west of us slower clocks are used, and the observations are taken at 6 o'clock by mountain time, and at 5 o'clock by Pacific time.

The stations at which the observations are taken do not have their names on the maps because the names would allow too little room for the figures.

How to Read the Map.

The symbols for the state of the weather are practically self explanatory. Clear weather, partly cloudy weather and cloudy weather being represented by clear, half-shaded, and full-shaded circles. When it is raining or snowing at the time of observation these conditions are represented by an R or S with the circle. The letter M. within a circle indicates that the report was missing usually on account of delayed or interrupted telegraphic service. It is fair to assume that the state of the weather at two adjacent stations represents conditions throughout the region between them. Hence one is able to estimate with a fair degree of certainty the weather at places from which reports are not received, from the weather prevailing round about.

Temperature and Rainfall.

The number written beside each circle on the map, or the first figure, if there be more than one, is the temperature in degrees Fahrenheit, at the time of the observation.

The second figure, when given, is the amount of rainfall, or water equivalent to the snowfall to hundredth of an inch, if any has fallen since the preceding map twenty-four hours before. Snow varies so much in density that it is customarily measured after melting.

This has the further advantage of allowing direct comparisons between rainfall and snowfall.

The third figure by the station circle indicates the velocity of the wind in miles per hour at each station. It is entered only when the wind-velocity is ten miles per hour or more. The absence of the rain figure shows that no rain has fallen in the preceding 24 hours, and the absence of the wind-figures indicates that light winds prevail.

Direction of Wind.

The direction of the wind is indicated by an arrow drawn through each circle. These arrows fly with the wind and are not to be looked at as wind vanes which point toward the wind. When no arrow is drawn at a circle it indicates that the air at that station is calm, or at least not strong enough to move the sensitive instrument used to measure the wind movements.

Dotted lines are drawn on the map to indicate the location of the lines of freezing and zero-temperature. All places to the north of the freezing line have freezing temperatures, and all to the north of the zero line have zero temperatures or lower.

Any one who will bear the foregoing explanation in mind will have no trouble in reading the weather map, and forming a very good notion of the sort of weather being experienced by friends at a distance, and the conditions under which the actions reported in other parts of this paper are taking place.

Make Your Own Predictions.

Considerably more information, and some experience is needed to make predictions of the weather from the weather map. Space will permit only the most important considerations to be mentioned here.

For forecasting the weather the most important things in the weather map are the isobars, or lines of equal air pressure. The air has weight, and presses down upon the earth with what would be an equal pressure if the earth were a smooth sphere, and if the air were not in motion. Differences in pressure on account of differences in elevation of the stations do not appear on the weather map, because they have been eliminated by what is called reduction to sea-level. The isobars then may be considered to represent the effects of motions of the air.

Inspection of almost any weather map will show that the winds are blowing toward regions of low pressure, marked "Low" on the map. Now, if the air converges toward a single region there must be an upcast or vertical current of air over that region. Similarly we find that the air flows away from a region of high pressure, marked "High" on the weather map, indicating a descending current over that region.

Air Currents.

A little reflection will show that if there is a suction drawing air upward it will be felt at the earth's surface, which explains the correspondence of ascending currents and low pressure, while descending currents deliver force, felt as an increase in the air pressure, at the earth's surface.

The important thing about all this is that ascending currents of air are expanding as they rise into the thinner upper air, and cooling by expansion, just as the ammonia in an ice plant cools by expansion. Now this cooling of the rising air condenses the moisture of the air to form rain or snow. Hence areas of low pressure are always regions of cloudy weather, and usually are attended by falling rain or snow. On the other hand, the areas of high pressure, with their descending air currents, warming by compression as they enter the lower and denser layers of the atmosphere are regions of clear, dry air. The clearness and dryness of the air permits the heat of the earth to escape readily when the nights are longer than the days, and the sun so low as to give very little heat, so that in winter the areas of high pressure are usually very cold, notwithstanding the warming of the air as it descends in them.

Drifting of Areas.

This association of characteristic types of weather with the areas of high and low pressure is one of the most important things in weather forecasting. It is necessary to understand the typical or normal contribution of weather conditions in areas of high and low pressure before success in weather forecasting can be attained.

Another exceedingly important matter in forecasting the weather, is the fact that the areas of high and low air pressure, drift or move from west to east. The distances traveled in a day, and the direction of motion, vary from month to month, and are subject to considerable accidental disturbance, but it can be said in general that the areas of low pressure accompanied by cloudy or rainy weather, tend to move along the parallels of latitude from west to east, taking in winter about three and a half days to cross the United States. The areas of high pressure generally appear over the Canadian northwest and cut across the parallels toward the southwest.

FUNERAL OF LOUIS AMMON HELD TODAY

Man Killed by Fall From Second Story Over Reus' Saloon Sunday Morning Buried at Whitewater.

Funeral services for Louis Ammon, whose dead body was found in the alley between Philip Reus' saloon and the West Side Fire station were held this afternoon from the home of the deceased in Whitewater, the remains being taken to Whitewater from this city at 10:45 o'clock this morning. Relatives of the deceased were here yesterday to make arrangements for the burial of the body. The circumstances in the case did not point to murder or foul play and a coroner's inquest was not called.

Ammon's body was discovered yesterday morning about a quarter after four o'clock by Officer Patrick Canning, while the latter was traveling his beat. The body lay across the alley with the head toward Milwaukee street. The impact of the fall broke Ammon's shoulder, nose and fractured his skull. Death was undoubtedly instantaneous.

Ammon had been working for some time past as porter in the Reus saloon and had slept in a store room upstairs. Facing on the alley on the second story is a double doorway, through which Ammon fell when he met his death. The supposition is that Ammon got up during the night, wandered out to the doorway and stepped too far out, falling some twelve or fifteen feet to the ground below. The man had but a work shirt on when he fell and the rest of his clothing were found in the room where he slept.

Ammon was sixty years old at the time of his death. Whitewater was formerly his home, but for several years past he had lived here, finding occupation similar to the one in which he was engaged at the time of his death. He was a veteran of the Civil War, drawing a pension from the government. He leaves a wife and one son, Howard, living in Whitewater, and a daughter, Mrs. John Hayes of Milwaukee.

BAND LIST GROWING BUT SLOWLY LATELY

Additions Being Received Daily But Many Fail to Respond to the Appeal.

If Janesville residents intend to have band concerts in the Court House Park this year they will have to increase their donations to the fund that is being raised for that purpose. Secretary Lane of the Industrial and Commercial club reports three additions to the list published last week which brings the total up somewhat but not near enough to the amount needed.

℞ RELIABLE DRUGGISTS.

Once There Was A Physician

A very good physician, by the way who had gathered to himself more than his share of grouch and he told a patient for whom he had just written a prescription: "Do n't take it to the Reliable. They make it by the tub there."

That was a fine testimonial as to the extent of the Reliable's business.

And supposing it was true—that we did make some remedy or mixture he had prescribed "BY THE TUB".

You can wager that the tub was antiseptically clean and had never been used to store cod liver oil in.

You may be sure that every ingredient that went into the tub was first quality; clean and pure.

You may know that the man who weighed the ingredients—who said how much of this and how little of that should go into the tub, was a Registered Pharmacist and knew his business.

It is certain that he had been working in a busy store, where more experience could be gained in a month than in some of the old style stores in a year. If experience doesn't mean added efficiency, then we don't know what it does mean.

We rather like that "make it by the tub" tribute.

Bring your prescriptions to the Reliable and we'll do our part RIGHT.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

After suffering with kidney and bladder trouble for seven weeks and attended by a medical man a greater part of that time and getting no relief, an operation was advised.

Having heard of the wonderful results of the Janesville Chiropractors, Puddicombe & Puddicombe, were having, I resolved to give them a trial. On the 24th day of June, 1911, at 10 P. M., the Chiropractors arrived at our farm. After the first adjustment the severe pain in my abdomen and back left me; up to this time I've taken four adjustments and am pleased to say I feel like a new woman. (Signed), MRS. L. B. BRUHM.

CALORICS TIED WITH ASSOCIATION TEAM FOR SECOND PLACE

Chefs' Victory Saturday Makes Change in Percentage Column of League, Gazette Dropping Back Into Fifth Place.

Free hitting of weak pitchers marked the sessions in the two games Saturday in the Commercial league at Athletic park, and errors were counted up against all teams. Two changes in the percentage column of the league were the results of Saturday's contests, the Calories, by defeating the Gazette team tieing with the Y. M. C. A. nine, which did not play, for second place, and pushing the Printers back into fifth place. The Plumbers, although they lost to the Hanson Furniture company's squad, took fourth place, with the Woodworkers still at the foot of the column. The Parkers, who have not lost a game this season, are safely in the lead.

Hansons Spring Sensation.

The sensation of the day was furnished by the Hanson players who beat the Plumbers 14 to 5. Howard, pitching for the Hansons, assisted his team to their first victory with his work with the war club, making a clean hit every time at bat. He started the batting in the first inning and his teammates, taking the cue from their twirler, slammed out twenty-one safe bingles off Denzer, slinging for the Plumbers. The Plumbers made ten hits off Howard's delivery, but could not cut down the Woodworkers' lead.

Gazette Lost.

In the second game of the afternoon the Calories took the Gazette nine into camp, 23 to 13. The Chefs had everything their own way up until the seventh inning when the Printers in a batting rally brought in nine runs. The Gazette squad, however, could not keep up the pace and the game was safe for the Calories. The contest lasted about two hours and a half.

JANESVILLE CUBS WON AT DELAVAN YESTERDAY

Local Team Beat Lake City Nine 7 to 5 in Thrilling Baseball Contest Sunday Afternoon.

In a game at Delavan yesterday the Janesville Cubs secured revenge on the Delavan city team for the beating administered to the cublets earlier in the season, defeating the Lake City team 7 to 5. The Delavan team had a strong line-up, a number of outside and professional players making up the nine opposing the Cubs. Miller of this city played third base for Delavan, Stoll of the Fond du Lac team of the W-I league was on the first sack and Piper, third baseman of the University of Wisconsin nine, played shortstop. Porter, second base for Janesville, was the star of the contest, hitting out a three-bagger in the seventh inning when the bases were full. Berger, pitching for the Cubs, put up a splendid game against the opposing batters. Silverthorn caught for the local nine. The Delavan batteries: O'Neil and Keith.

AUTOS OF THE FUTURE.

During the past summer Janesville has been the city of control for two automobile tours. Each day, particularly Sunday, the streets are filled with cars from all parts of the country. The automobile is used for delivery purposes, farmers are buying machines for use on the farms and professional men for handling their business. It will be hard to find another single industry that instances a rapid progress like that of the making of automobiles. Where, ten years ago, "the rich man's plaything" was still the subject of considerable derision, today it has become the world's necessity. A decade ago a few hundred thousand dollars would cover the entire financial investment. At the present time such investments run into the hundreds of millions. The horseless vehicle now furnishes employment to more than 250,000 people, and nearly a million derive their living from the machines. The man who ten years ago could take the automobile a few miles without getting into trouble was looked upon almost as a hero. The motorist who in the year 1911 has less than a transcontinental record need not consider himself at all conspicuous. When the utility of the auto dawned on men with inventive talents genius made improvement on improvement. There are large automobiles and small automobiles, machines worth almost a king's ransom and others so inexpensive that few there are who cannot own one.

And now, when all factors point to a future of unlimited possibilities, one of the leading men in the business issues a warning. That is, he says that, with all that the machine has achieved in the past, much more will be expected of it in the future. Efficiency in manufacture, faultless assembling of parts, integrity in selling: these essentials will be put to their severest test as time goes on. There is little doubt that the growth of the industry in some respects has been almost too rapid for its own good. Automobile building is not an "every man's" business. The tremendous demand may have worked allurement, but if ever a trade required skill and exercise of judgment this one does.

What the automobile of ten years hence will be can be merely hinted at. As with the aeroplane, that which makes for propulsion will govern speed and safety. Every great industry benefits by the process of elimination; only the fittest will remain behind. In the nature of things, the motor truck must become the dominant freight carrier of the future. And as the nation keeps on expanding, as farmer and mechanic and millionaire come to look more and more for swift individual transportation, automobiles will be still more in demand. Ten years hence ought to see the motor vehicle a universal friend of man, affording untold opportunity for business advancement and recreation.

HERE IS A NEW ONE.

Of course with the lawns of the city burned to a crisp the following article can not be called apropos, but still it is too good to keep hidden under the bushel. The problem of keeping the lawns trimmed, which has bothered many a Janesville property-owner, is solved at one full swoop, and not only that but also the question of rooting out the weeds and noxious growths about the yards. Goats have been used to clear away scrubby wooden plots; cities have huge flocks of sheep to keep their parks cleared of grass, but the latest idea, that of having guinea pigs as "lawn-mowers" is a new one. The story comes from a reliable eastern journal and is worth reading.

"There is probably not a male property-owner in this country or in Canada, if, indeed, there can be found one in the wide world, who will not regard with feelings of mixed joy and sadness the discovery reported by Consul Taylor of Nottingham, Eng., to the state department at Washington. The discovery is that guinea pigs can be employed to mow lawns. The thing has been demonstrated in the neighborhood of Greenhithe, Kent, if we are to take for it the word of an agricultural writer quoted by Consul Taylor. It seems that all that is necessary is to arrange around the lawn requiring attention a low wire barrier such as any male commuter can erect. Into this may be turned a few guinea pigs, the number to be regulated by the hurry one is in about the completion of the job. The animals will at once attack all the worst weeds. They will consume even those broad-leaved plants before which the lawn-mower hesitates and frequently weakens. In an incredibly short space of time they will have the grass as even as the nap of a Persian rug. And all the property-owner has to do is look on."

STREET LIGHTING.

One of the subjects that the council will be called upon to settle soon is the proposition of the business men for a better and more efficient lighting system for the streets down town. It is a matter which deserves consideration and as an advertising feature for the city its value can not be overestimated. The Art lighting poles are in use in many cities and Janesville could well afford to follow the lead taken by even smaller communities. The matter as it now stands is that the cost of installation of the lighting system be paid by the property-owners, the tenants paying half. The maintenance is to be paid for by the city. In round figures it would not mean more than an expenditure of $2,600 a year more than the present system costs and would be a benefit to the whole city. It is up to the aldermen to decide this matter and they can well afford to consider it carefully before passing an adverse judgment on the question.

THE CANADIAN PACT.

So the senate passed the Canadian tariff after all. The long-winded speeches and personal attacks upon President Taft failed to stop the tide which had set in for a good, sane reciprocal agreement with the near neighbor across the line, which looks to the future as well as to the needs of today. Republican and democratic senators that voted for it will live to see their hopes realized when it is proclaimed one of the greatest bits of legislation that congress has passed in many years.

Senator Stephenson, with his immense lumber interests, voted for reciprocity with Canada, despite the efforts of the lumbermen throughout the country to prove it would work great hardships upon the poor millionaires that have helped hold up the people for years.

Beloit and Evansville are both to have fairs this fall so that the residents of Janesville can have an opportunity of visiting them. Meanwhile it is to the point to see that matters adjust themselves so that next year Janesville can have a fair of its own.

Haiti is back at its normal condition of revolution again. Meanwhile an American is in the harbor with a private yacht bluffing the rebels and regulars to cease fighting or it will blow up their cities with a few popguns it has on board.

The rains of Saturday and Sunday have done untold good to the crops and burned up pastures. More rain is needed, however, to insure good crops.

The stand-pat English peer has been lifted out of his position and is now practically out of the real consideration of politics.

King George is ready to start up his factory of making peers and turn them out by the yard or bolt.

PRESS COMMENT.

Help and Friendship.

Marinette Eagle-Star: Nothing succeeds like success. So goes the old saying. It may be true. But it is the only thing for which you can never forgive the other chap. Let him slip and fall over so many times, and you will help him up, set him on his feet, plead with him, scold him—but he is still the "old man" and you won't let anybody down him. But if he should stand alone, and walk out, clear away from you, what then? The glad eye of friendship is at once changed to the frigid glance of critical disfavor. That follow, you decide forthwith will bear watching.

Still at the Helm.

Wisconsin State Journal: Those who think Mr. Bryan does not intend to dictate the nomination will do well to read over the list of questions which he wants to have put up to men "who are in the attitude of candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination." They are all designed to show how a man stands on everything Mr. Bryan wants.

More Investigations.

Racine News: Without knocking anybody, it may be safe that it's up to some statutes to probe the allegations that some senators are so seldom in their seats that they have to be identified to get by the doorkeepers when they do show up.

Protection!

Sheboygan Journal: The new Wisconsin child labor law is said to bar even amateur child actors under 14 years of age. There are some compensations for the public even in that.

The Patient Poor.

Milwaukee Journal: If you want to be wealthy nowadays, take your choice between a gold mine and a bushel of potatoes. Thus do the farmers prosper in spite of the threatened ravages of reciprocity.

His Turn Coming.

Green Bay Gazette: Attorney General Wickersham refuses to talk on the Wiley or Alaskan matters. The attorney general perhaps is of the opinion that he will have enough to say a little later regarding these cases.

Dodging.

Rockford Star: An unsettled question is: Which can make a pedestrian jump the quickest, an automobile or a motorcycle?

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

THE COUNTRY GIRL IN TOWN.

She is going alone to the city.

In the country nothing happens. Life there is a monotone. And the girl does not know that the greatest boon is to be content and that the quiet places are the best.

She is discontented.

Does she not see the same faces every Sunday at the church and at the picnics? She knows one as "Bill," another as "Sarah," and the familiarity has become trite. And over all the countryside is the never changing look of things. Yonder is the city! Everything there is different—plenty of new faces and sensations. The scenes change like a kaleidoscope. The city air is tonic. Surely life is fuller there.

She is young and innocent.

She dreams fanciful dreams. She is impatient of restraint. She is lured by the glamour of the town. She does not know how safe is the sheltered life of the quiet neighborhood and how dangerous the city. She does not know the human limits of her virtues under strong temptation. She does not know that her gentleness of nature prevents her using upon the deceitful tempter the force of scorn which the sophisticated can summon to their aid. She does not know her own weakness.

Poor lassie!

Her loving disposition scarcely knows how to deny. Her sweet unselfishness scarcely is able to refuse. Every best quality of her girlish self may lead to her undoing. There the defenseless chicken strays. Over that place hovers the cruel hawk and swoops upon its prey.

Innocent girl!

If she should chance to fall into the wrong set of associates and there should be no one near and intimate enough to warn and guide—why, God help the child!

If, however, the girl is strong of character, well instructed by a careful mother, capable of restraint, self reliant, she will take good care of herself, render a good account and rise above the dangerous undercurrents of temptation.

But if not—

If not she will be swallowed up by the insatiable maw of the city to be defiled and spewed out, bereft of all that makes her a sweet and innocent girl.

A TIRED HEART

Oh, soothe and caress me! My labors distress me, I'm tired of my striving, so endless and vain; so sing to me, dearie! I'm weary, so weary! My bosom is filled with the torture of pain! I'm tired of the struggle! I'm longing to snuggle against your kind bosom and look in your eyes! So long have I swatted the blooming dodrotted, persistent, immoral, industrious flies! When first with my swatter I went forth to slaughter, my heart was aglow with a Homeric fire; I biffed 'em and socked 'em, and mashed 'em and croaked 'em, as though of my labors I never should tire. But where is the profit of sending to Tophet a pitiful hundred of pestilent flies? A million come buzzin' in place of each dozen you send to the graveyard—a blight on their eyes! It may be that sages in far distant ages will think up a method of laying them low, but this plan of swattin' by hand is too rotten—we've more flies today than we had long ago. So soothe and caress me, and fondle and bless me, I'm sad and I'm loony, so sing "Annie Rooney," and comb out my whiskers and tickle my nose.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

The barometric depression that was in the northern Rocky Mountain region Saturday morning developed into a storm of considerable intensity and wide extent. It moved across the upper Mississippi valley during Sunday and across the upper lake region to Ontario where its center now is. General rains and high winds attended its passage through the north central states, and are now preceding it in the valley and middle Atlantic coast. The following rainfalls exceeding one inch occurred during the past 24 hours: Duluth 1.08, Port Arthur 1, Houghton 1.82, Marquette 1.24, Escanaba 1.66, Sault Ste. Marie 1.40.

An anticyclone follows the storm in the northern Rocky Mountains and northern plains. It is preceded by brisk northwesterly winds, and attended by clear, cool weather. Temperatures of 36 to 40 were reached at many stations in the northern Rockies this morning. It is hot on the north Pacific coast, a maximum of 106 degrees being reported at Roseburg.

CURIOUS BITS OF HISTORY

By A. W. MACY.

A BLANKET PROCESSION.

In 1817 the dissatisfied weavers of Lancashire, England, got together and resolved to march up to London and lay their grievances before the prince regent. As it was quite a way to London, each took a blanket along to wrap about him at night. About 5,000 made the start, and a curious looking parade it must have been. One eyewitness described the marchers as "a most deplorable lot, without food and without organization." Scarcely had they begun to move when they were attacked by the military and partially dispersed. Some kept on, but the desertions became more and more frequent. By the time the marching column reached the outskirts of London it had dwindled to six persons, and not one reached the presence of the prince regent.

Etymology of "Pumpernickel."

The story is that in the Napoleonic invasions of a century ago a mounted French officer put up at a wayside inn, and the proprietor wishing to give him of the best placed before him some of this black bread. The French officer, however, thrust it from him, exclaiming: "Ce n'est pas bon pour moi, mais c'est bon pour Nicol," that being the name of his horse. Hence in course of time arose the appellation "pumpernickel" applied to this bread.—From a letter in the Saturday Review.

YOUTHS HELD UP ON TRAIN LAST NIGHT

TWO YOUNG MEN FORCED TO GIVE UP MONEY AT POINT OF PISTOL ON STOCK TRAIN.

DIXON HOME ROBBED

Thugs Who Held Up Boys Thought to Have Stolen Money and Valuables at J. T. Dixon Residence—Freight Car Robbery.

Two young men, beating their way from Elroy south on the Northwestern stock freight, No. 578, arriving here about eleven o'clock last night, were held up by two men on the road and robbed of $1.50 and $2.75 respectively. The two men, one of whom is thought to be an Indian or a negro and the other a white, forced the youths to go through a trap door in the top of a stock car down into the car, which was loaded with pigs. The door was then locked and the white man was left on guard while the other went into the car through an end door and forced the boys to give up their money at the point of an automatic pistol. After taking their cash, the negro or Indian, went out the way he came, locking the exit so that the young men were securely locked in. In passing through Madison, the car in which the youths were locked, stopped on a crossing just a few feet from where a policeman was standing, but the man with the gun threatened them with death if they called out and they remained silent. The two robbers, so the young men said, jumped from the train near the Cronk brewery. The young men were released from their prison by trainmen at South Janesville. The victims immediately reported the matter to the police.

Dixon Home Robbed.

About 12:30 oclock last night robbers entered the home of John T. Dixon, 336, North Washington street. A screen in one of the rooms was pushed up and a suit of clothes containing $20 in money and a gold watch and chain were taken. A pocketbook containing certificates of deposit in a local bank, were also stolen by the robbers, but these are of no value to the thieves. The clothes were later found by Mr. Dixon in the yard, and papers, which they contained, were strown about, indicating that only money or valuables was sought by the marauders. A search was made last night by the officers of the yards and other places where suspects might be found and the investigation was continued today by the police, but no clues were found.

Men Described to Police.

That the holdup of the two young men and the robbery of the Dixon home were the work of the same two men is the theory of the police today. Substantiation for this is given in the fact that the two men left the stock train but a short distance from the Dixon home. A fairly good description of the bandits was furnished by the two young men. The description of one was that he was dark, resembling a negro, but one of the youths stated that he believed the man was an Indian. The Indian, he said, was tall, well dressed and wore a Stetson hat. It is believed that the robbers left town immediately, probably traveling on freight trains in the manner they reached this city.

Freight Car Robbery.

Some time between Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning, presumably Saturday night, seven freight cars, standing on the tracks of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad near the transfer house, were broken into by thieves. Several cases in one of the cars were opened and seven small bottles of olives and two packages of crackerjack were stolen. It was evident that small boys were responsible for the theft and several in the neighborhood were questioned, one of them being told to report at the police station today. Up until noon, however, the lad had not heeded the orders.

ASPIRING FIGHTER GIVEN FIVE DAYS IN COUNTY JAIL

"Chick" Blow, Who Carried Chip on Shoulder Saturday Night, Sentenced for Drunk and Disorderly Behavior.

Charles ("Chick") Blow, a local young man, who has a reputation for saloon brawls, was arraigned this morning in municipal court and sentenced by Judge C. L. Fifield to five days in jail, to pay a fine of $2 and costs, $3 in all, or serve five additional days in jail for drunk and disorderly behavior. Blow, who had been drinking quite heavily, was arrested Saturday night near the depots, just after he had engaged in a fight with another youth, by Officer Edward Hallen, who is substituting for Officer Thomas Morrissey on the west side of the river. Hallen started for the city lock-up with his prisoner, fairly dragging along the aspiring scrapper, but before he had reached the station was forced to take Blow into the Grand hotel and call for aid. Some of Blow's friends, young toughs, had meanwhile learned the news and were following Hallen up, intending to beat him up. Officers Slim Dorh and Patrick Fanning answered the call for help and Blow was taken to the station, the crowd of would-be sluggers dispersing. Blow is said to have a propensity for picking fights when under the influence of liquor. A year or so ago, he and a bar-room companion served a term in the Sauk county jail for assaulting a bartender.

Seven others were arraigned with Blow this morning for the same charge and, with the exception of one, all were taken to the county jail. Jack Kelly pleaded not guilty to the drunkenness charge and his case was set for half past three o'clock this afternoon for Officer John Brown, who made the arrest, to be present.

"Jack" Dooley, who has made his appearance in court frequently of late, was lectured by the judge this morning and warned that unless he reformed a more severe penalty than a jail sentence might be imposed. Dooley was told that if a "second offense" charge were brought against him, it would mean a term of one year in the state prison at Waupun. Five days flat with a fine of $5 and costs or ten additional days was the sentence fixed by the court.

Ed. Swan of Stoughton and Charles Pennow went down for terms of six days each in default of payment of fines of $3 and costs.

James Hennessey and William English, who were brought up for the first time in the local court, received lighter punishment, the decree being that they spend three days each with the sheriff in default of payment of fines of $1 and costs.

EMPLOYEES OF CITY UNDER THE NEW LAW

All Men Hired by City, Not Heads of Departments or Officers, Receive Benefits of Employers' Liability Statute.

Under the new employer's liability law, passed at the recent session of the legislature, all employees of the city of Janesville, who are not elected or appointed to office, will come under the law and receive the benefits of it. Word to this effect has been received by City Attorney Maxfield from the new industrial commission, created by the enactment of the law. Officers of the city or heads of departments are not included under the law, but men employed under them, it is held, will be the beneficiaries. In case of accidents resulting in injuries or death, the employee or his heirs do not have to take the matter into court, but report the matter to the commission, which fixes the amount of damages sustained. Private corporations have to signify whether or not they desire to act under the law, but the provisions of the statute state that all cities of the state are included under the act.

Gas and Water Cases.

A decision is expected soon from the railroad rate commission at Madison on the cases instituted by City Attorney H. L. Maxfield against the Janesville Water company and the New Gas Light company. Mr. Maxfield called up the offices of the commission a few days ago, asking for a report on the matter and was informed that the engineers had not made out their full report, but that as soon as their figures were in, the commission would render a decision.

TAKEN IN BELOIT ON ABDUCTION CHARGE

Man Who Secured License in Janesville, Thursday, Wanted in Chicago for Abduction of Thirteen Year Old Girl.

Purporting to be a Beloit saloonkeeper, a man giving his name as Frank T. Strouse, who is wanted in Chicago on an abduction charge, secured a marriage license at the county clerk's office last Thursday, and on Saturday was arrested in Beloit and taken to Chicago for trial. Bridget Kelp is the name of the girl mentioned in the marriage and the age given by Strouse to the county clerk was 19 years. Her real age, it appears, was 13 years, and the name given to the police was Bridget Kelpszalten. She had disappeared from her home in Chicago last Sunday. Complaint was made to the Chicago police and the couple was traced as far as Rockford. It is evident that the couple came to Beloit where they intended to get married.

Strouse visited the office of the county clerk and secured his license, Thursday, without difficulty, answering all the questions in a straightforward manner. The girl was in Janesville at the time the license was purchased but was not in the clerk's office. They returned to Beloit where they were arrested on suspicion Saturday morning and the Chicago police were communicated with. An officer came to Beloit and took the man to Chicago where he will be held for trial on charges of abduction and perjury.

Licenses to Wed. Two marriage licenses were issued at the office of the county clerk today, as follows: to Thorwald Odegaard and Emma Torgerson, both of Beloit and to Thomas K. Lever and Bertha Olga Hoff, both of the town of Spring Valley.

BROWNTOWN MAN IS RUN OVER BY CARS AND KILLED SUNDAY

James Michaels, While Riding on Gollmar Brothers' Circus Train, Fell Beneath Trucks and Killed Near Bardwell Jct.

James Michaels of Browntown was killed at Bardwell Junction yesterday while riding on the Gollmar Brothers' circus train which was enroute to Delavan. The man, who is believed to have been slightly intoxicated, had evidently fallen from the bumpers on which he was riding and was crushed by the wheels. There was no one who saw the accident, but according to the statement of Engineer Peter Clark, who was in charge of the engine, Michaels met his fate in the manner described.

According to Engineer Clark there was no possibility of the man being hit by the engine as the mutilated body was found beneath the train as it pulled into the station. He had joined the circus as an employee last Saturday and was on the train which passed through this city early Sunday morning.

Michaels had a leg amputated by being run over by a train on the Milwaukee road a year ago. He leaves three brothers and a sister. The remains were taken to his home at Browntown at noon today, accompanied by his brother, Will Michaels, of Browntown.

MAINE'S HULL OUT OF WATER.

Only Thin Mud Now Hides "Secret" of 1898 Disaster.

Havana, July 24.—The second step in the great task of uncovering the Maine was completed with the pumping up of the last few feet of water surrounding the dismembered hull. The bottom of the cofferdam is now nothing but thin mud, which hides whatever there may be of the secret of the disaster of 1898.

The bodies taken out of the wreck are being placed in metal coffins and taken on board the collier Leonidas. Eleven bodies have now been found of a total of 88 missing. Identification, of course, is impossible, as all of these were underneath the wreck of the conning tower.

Many bodies are visible, pinned under tons of metal, but they cannot be recovered until the wreck is dismembered.

TWO DIE IN SUICIDE PACT.

Husband and Wife Take Carbolic Acid and End Lives.

Middletown, N. Y., July 24.—The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. C. Crane, well-known residents of this city were found in their home, dressed in their wedding clothes of years ago and locked in each others arms. The couple had apparently committed suicide by taking carbolic acid several days ago, having made a suicide compact to that effect months ago.

On a dresser in the sitting room were two letters signed by the couple, evidently written by the wife.

The notes stated that the cases were those of suicide and that lack of friends was the cause of the act.

WILL TRY TO RETAKE BOSTON.

Regular Army Officers Will Umpire Work of Massachusetts Militia.

Billerica, Mass., July 24.—Mimic war, in which some 6,000 troops of the state militia will take part, was declared in Massachusetts today. The troops took position and began to unravel the war problem that has been set up for them to solve.

This problem, briefly, is that the "red" army of invasion is theoretically supposed to have captured Boston and the Atlantic seaboard, while the "blue" army, representing American troops, is to try and drive them back and recapture Boston.

Regular army officers will act as umpires and observers.

POSTAL MEN GIVEN AN INCREASE

City Carriers and Clerks to Receive Promotions and More Pay.

Washington, July 24.—Postmaster General Hitchcock ordered promotions for post office clerks and city carriers which carry increases in salaries approximating $2,000,000 a year. Orders were issued for promotions in the railway mail service which will total $175,000 a year. These increases are in addition to the increases for rural mail carriers totaling $4,000,000 a year, which became effective July 1.

Had Good Backing.

An old man in a poorhouse who was asked by a visitor if he had any source of income replied: "Madam, if you must know, I haven't got any money, but I've got good backing. I've got fine backing. I'm backed by one of the richest counties in the state."

RARE PEARL FOUND IN CATFISH RIVER

Phillip Ullius Jr., of Town of Fulton Secures Valuable Gem for Which He Has Refused $500.—Edgerton News.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Edgerton, July 24.—A valuable pearl found in a shell taken out of Catfish river by Phillip Ullius, Jr., of the town of Fulton, a day or two since is the cause of much excitement and surprise to all people interested in rare gems in this section. The gem is perfect in its shape, of bluish tint and weighs fourteen grains. An offer of $500 for it has been refused.

Mr. Ullius has two other gems taken from the same stream and not so valuable, and for the other three he has refused an offer of $800. The pearl recently found is the rarest and most valuable one ever taken out of the Catfish river and from now on pearl fishing will, no doubt, occupy the time of many.

For Cleaning Ivory Ornaments.

To clean ivory ornaments, first brush them well with a soft lukewarm water and a little soap; then rinse them in water of the same temperature, dry with a cloth and a brush till the luster reappears. For a little alcohol upon the brush, as should the ivory have become yellow, drying it in a gentle heat is recommended. I have tried this process many times, and have always had the greatest success. —Woman's Home Companion.

Physician's Maladies.

A French newspaper publishes some statistics showing the causes of death in the medical profession. The figures are impressive, but there is no indication as to the source of the information. We read that 44 per cent. die of heart disease, 20 per cent. from nervous affections, 20 per cent. from the morphia habit, and 7 per cent. from tuberculosis. The prevalence of morphia is ascribed to the fact that a doctor knows when his malady is incurable, and morphia is right to soothe the mind.

Painful Recollection.

"Speaking of these 'abandoned farms,'" said the suburban grocer, wiping his nose with his once white apron, "I abandoned a good one myself 15 years ago, and came to town because I thought I could get rich quicker here—blame my fool hide!"

Preparedness.

If a great change is to be made in human affairs the minds of men will be fitted to it; the general opinions and feeling will draw that way. Every fear and hope will forward it; and they who persist in opposing this mighty current will appear rather to resist the decrees of Providence itself than the mere designs of men. They will not be so much resolute and firm as perverse and obstinate.—Burke.

Treasure Found in Barn.

Quite a fortune was found in an old barn at Indiana, Pa., the other day. While tearing down the structure, which formerly belonged to his uncle, who died recently, Frank Kohne found a trunk hidden beneath the floor in which was secreted $3,000 in bills and cash.

Knowledge.

Properly thou hast no other knowledge but what thou hast got by working: the rest is all yet a hypothesis of knowledge; a thing to be argued of in schools, a thing floating in the clouds, in endless logic-vortices, till we try it and fix it. "Working" His Way.

"The impression that Harvard is a rich man's college is quite erroneous. Statistics show that 'ween one-quarter and one-third of the Harvard students are self-supporting." Yes, indeed. Damascus of Marvelous View.

The view of Damascus from the mountain where Mohammed made his great renunciation is one of the marvelous views of the world. Again and again I deserted the mosques, the bazaars, the marble baths, the courts of the fountains, the shadowy khans and the gardens by the streams, for that bare height on which Abraham is said to have had the unity of God revealed to him.—Century.

Honest Confession.

The census enumerator was confronted at the door by a meek and apologetic little man. "Who's the head of the house?" asked the census man. "From a strictly legal standpoint," replied the little man, "I suppose I am, but when you get right right down to brass tacks I ain't."

A RARE TREAT

The Village Blacksmith

This great masterpiece painted by H. de Mareau will be displayed free to the public on our second floor for TWO WEEKS, COMMENCING JULY 24th. Valued now at $60,000.

To bring this great painting to Janesville costs The Big Store a neat sum, but it is estimated that 20,000 people will see it during the two weeks' exhibition, which cannot help but result favorably to us.

This world famous canvas is the crowning achievement of H. de Mareau, a painter of Cannes, France, who died almost a pauper in 1893. The picture was sold by his widow for $2,500, and after winning a medal at the Grand Salon in Paris, it changed hands five times at a gradually increasing price till its present owner paid $42,500 for it. It is a masterpiece of firelight work and subtle coloring, perfect to the smallest detail, the almost animated portrayal of the subject recalled instantly to mind the words in Longfellow's immortal poem:

"The Smith, a mighty man is he,
With large and sinewy hands;
And the muscles of his brawny arms
Are strong as iron bands."

The picture is 7x8 feet. It has traveled over 70,000 miles in the United States during its various exhibitions, and has been viewed by twelve million people.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON.

I'M GOING to promulgate one of my queer schemes today.

People who don't like queer schemes are respectfully warned to keep off the premises. Trespassers prosecuted to the full extent of boredom.

The queer scheme is this—the establishment of an introduction bureau in every town and city of any size in the country.

When I was an active newspaper woman I was sent, one hot night, to the weather bureau to get a list of the hottest cities all over the country and sundry other details—you know the kind of hot weather story all papers occasionally print. The full reports from the different cities had not yet come in and while I was waiting for them I conversed with the assistant clerk of the weather, a very pleasant, well mannered young man.

In the course of the conversation he confided to me that he had come to the city only a few weeks ago and had found it a very homesick place.

Said he, "I'd like to meet some nice girls. I like girls and I'd like to have someone I could take to the theatre occasionally and things like that. But how's a fellow going to meet them if he doesn't know anybody in the city? Of course, I could pick up a girl on the street any time, or I suppose I could make friends with a telephone girl over the wire, but that isn't the kind of girl I want. I want to meet some nice girls."

Just then the fact that it had been 102 in the shade in Tacoma, which was the last of the bulletins I had been waiting for, arrived, and I had to hurry back to my paper, so I wasn't able to hear any more of the young man's tale of woe.

But with me, along with the bulletins, I took a new born idea—the introduction bureau.

There must be other young men in the big cities all over the country situated as this one was.

There undoubtedly are myriads of young girls in the same position.

Now why can't each city have an introduction bureau, whose purpose should be to bring these young people together and introduce them in a perfectly respectable way?

The bureau could be made up of representatives from all the churches, all the young peoples' societies, and all the social settlements and similar institutions in the city.

A young person desiring its services would be supposed to bring references from some responsible person in the home town.

These would be presented to the secretary of the introduction bureau. The bureau would then see that the young man or woman was introduced to other young men and women. Furthermore, through the societies represented in it and through parties and entertainments which it could give itself, the bureau would do all possible to see that the strangers had plenty of healthy social life.

This is merely a suggestive outline of the introduction bureau's make-up, duties and scope. If such a bureau were ever really established it would undoubtedly work itself out in its own way.

Now is it really such an absurd and impossible scheme?

Truly, I can't see it so.

GIRL SAVES LIFE; GETS RECOGNITION FROM UNCLE SAM FOR HEROISM.

Indianapolis, Ind.—For the second time in the history of the United States, a girl in her teens has been awarded a medal for heroism by the President on the recommendation of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Miss Nettie Caskey, sixteen years old, of Fairmont, Indiana, is the brave lass thus honored. At imminent personal risk she saved her little niece, Martelle Caskey, from certain death under the wheels of a rapidly moving train. It was while the little Caskey girl was visiting her at her home only a short distance from the Pennsylvania railroad near Fairmont that the incident occurred.

While attempting to cross the tracks unaware of the danger, Martelle Caskey stepped in front of the engine then less than 100 feet away. The engineer attempted to stop but was unable to do so. Just at the moment that it seemed certain that the train would strike her, Nattie seized the child, sprang from the tracks and rolled with her down the steep embankment. The front of the engine grazed the skirts of Miss Nettie as she sprang away from it.

A DUTCH BONNET THAT ANY MAID MIGHT MAKE.

Just a stripe of lace and embroidery, and a semi-circle of crown, will make this fetching cap which casts such a becoming shade over the eyes and which almost completely covers the hair. The invalid friend who is too weak or too weary to submit to a tedious hair-dressing process will specially appreciate one of these pretty caps. The model pictured is made of dotted net bands of fine embroidery sewed on the net brim lending sufficient stiffness to make it hold its shape. Blue ribbon run through beading and blue bows finish the cap.

DIET AND HEALTH HINTS

By DR. T. J. ALLEN
Food Specialist

COOKING ALBUMINOUS FOOD AT HIGH TEMPERATURE SHOULD BE AVOIDED.

The essential element of food, of all animals, is albumen. Flesh is chiefly albumen. The food of the amoeba, the one-celled animal, which is typical of all animal life, is albumen. Albumen is the warp of the blood from which all tissues are built. The amoeba absorbs its food from the water in which it lives, and that albumen must be in its natural state; if furnished only cooked albumen, it will die. Now, the blood cells are essentially amoeba, and their natural food is natural albumen.

Albumen coagulates at a temperature of 160 degrees, becoming, to use a popular term, leathery and unsuitable for cell food. Natural albumen is quickly converted in the stomach by the action of pepsin and hydrochloric acid into soluble peptone. This peptone cannot be coagulated by heat, and easily passes through animal membranes; that is, it is easily absorbed in the intestinal canal. But when it is already coagulated by heat before it is conveyed to the stomach, it cannot be converted into a non-coagulable, soluble peptone; it cannot become assimilable cell food. Of course the coagulation by heat is rarely complete, even in roasted foods, but any temperature above 160 is injurious. For instance, a child cannot be properly nourished on boiled milk. The heat that kills the bacteria also kills the nutritive value of the albumen. No one experienced in infant feeding advises boiled milk; some object even to pasteurizing. This, however, requires a much lower temperature.

The Skin and Not the Blood.

Until recently it has been a generally accepted proposition that eczema was a disease of the blood, and that in order to cure it, the blood must be purified and enriched by internal remedies. Careful experiments and scientific investigations have taught us that eczema is purely a skin disease, and curable through the skin alone. A great majority of persons afflicted with eczema have no other ailment, which is accepted as positive proof that it is purely a skin disease. Having established this fact, the chemists of the American Drug and Press Association set about to compound a prescription that would successfully cope with this disease, and after much investigating brought out Meritol Eczema Remedy, the effect of which is marvelous. If you are afflicted with this loathsome disease, do not delay trying Meritol Eczema Remedy. You will be surprised at its prompt action, its soothing effect and its permanent results. Reliable Drug Co. are commissioned ville.

Some Climate.

"Oh, yes, we have a wonderful climate," said the man from southern Texas. "Why, only last season we raised a pumpkin so large that, after sawing it in two, my wife used the halves as cradles in which to rock the babies." "Yes," replied the man from New York; "but in my state it's a common thing to find three full-grown policemen asleep on one beat."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Heart and Home Talks

Vacation Chats.

A Camera Vacation.

THE person who is fond of photography can have a most enjoyable vacation if he will indulge himself just as much as he pleases in his hobby. By this is not meant simply to take his camera with him on his vacation and snap pictures as he goes, but to center his vacation around his camera.

It is not necessary to go away from home to do this. The money usually spent on tickets for traveling could be spent in purchasing long-wanted books or materials—a fine lens, perhaps—which before had seemed beyond one's means. And, if so much money is allowed for a vacation, and it is now taken for this purpose, the procedure is not extravagance.

Then a study could be made of some special kind of photography—indoor work, or flowers, or animals or birds, whatever most appealed. If the whole vacation were spent outdoors studying nature with a camera, such a vacation to a camera enthusiast would be a delight. Or if one desired to perfect himself in some of the mechanical parts of the art such as developing or printing, the vacation leisure could be taken for this. All this could be done right at home, so that all the vacation allowance could be spent on sport with the camera itself.

The one fond of photography can find plenty of pleasurable ways to pass camera days. And such a vacation would as surely profit one physically and mentally as traveling or pleasuring in other ways. For what the mind delights in brings refreshment and exhilaration to the body. So that a vacation of this sort is as stimulating and restful to the camera fiend as any other kind would be.

And though one does not take a vacation with the idea of making money, rather the reverse, proficiency in photography is not a bad investment. Though one may not turn it to financial account on this particular vacation, later, or perhaps on another vacation, it may yield a good harvest of dollars. A woman who had made herself proficient in photography sold almost a hundred dollars' worth of pictures upon her return from a trip to Europe. This was rather a remarkable feat, for pictures of Europe are so common one would not think they would be in demand. But her pictures were so charming, so artistic, so unusual, that everyone who saw them went wild over them. She had quite an ordinary camera, too; just a small one that cost but a few dollars. So the camera vacation will yield pleasure to the camera enthusiast and perhaps later, profit.

GO TO your banquet, then, but use delight
So as to rise still with an appetite.

SEASONABLE DISHES.

These hot days when meat dishes seem too heavy for the digestion, one may turn to various made dishes which are sufficiently satisfying.

Rice is such a nutritious and easily digested food and in combination with other foods and flavors furnishes quite a variety of diet.

In cooking rice, it should be thoroughly washed and then dropped into rapidly boiling water a little at a time to prevent the water from cooling, and then cooked until perfectly soft. If the rice is to be served simply and the grains left whole and distinct, it is a good plan to drain from the boiling water into a colander, and allow the cold water from the tap to wash it. Reheat and serve.

Rice Croquettes.—These make a dish that is hearty enough to take the place of meat. Take cold cooked rice after it has been blanched as above, after cooking in milk instead of water, and using a cup of rice to a quart of milk and a teaspoonful of salt. Mold the rice and then roll in egg and crumbs, pouring egg over it the second time and again rolling in crumbs to completely cover. Fry in deep fat and drain on brown paper. These croquettes may be served with a tomato sauce or with a smooth white sauce to which has been added a half cup of grated cheese. Pile the croquettes on a chop plate and pour over the cheese sauce. Serve hot.

Macaroni is another food that may easily take the place of meat. It is delicious simply boiled and served with grated cheese sprinkled over it, or when a more substantial dish is needed add hard cooked eggs and a cup of white sauce, onion juice and finish the top with buttered crumbs and bake.

Egg Timbales.—Beat six eggs until light without separating the whites from the yolks. Add a scant teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper, a teaspoonful of chopped parsley, a little onion juice and a cup and a half of rich milk. Cook in molds and serve surrounded by peas or asparagus in white sauce.

REV. HOFFMEISTER ADDRESSES CHURCHES

SPOKE IN THE UNION SERVICE AT THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH LAST NIGHT.

AN EXCELLENT SERMON

On the "Ethical Test of Religion," Although Short, the Sermon Was Very Vital and to the Point.

At the Union service held in the Congregational church last night, Rev. E. C. Hoffmeister, of the Lutheran church, spoke on "The Ethical Test of Religion."

"When we think of the Apostle John," he said, "we think of him as John the Loving; as John the Beloved, resting in Jesus' bosom. But John was also the Son of Thunder. In the epistles that he wrote so full of love, we find him also attacking evil unsparingly. As it was with John, so it is with everything; there are two sides to all things. There is Light and Darkness; Truth and Lies; Good and Evil; the Church of God and the side of the Unbelief. Which side are we on, is the question for us. What test shall be applied? The ethical test is the one sure test.

"This test is based on two commandments 'Thou shalt love the Lord with all thy heart and with all thy soul and with all thy might;' and the other, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.' The latter is the proof of the existence of the former. The former is the basis of our test. Can we test our religion by intelligence, by knowledge? No. By a system or doctrine? No. Or by a basic principle? No.

"To enlighten men on Jesus' truths means rapture. How does this affect us? Does it mean that it leads us? Is religion not of the head, but of the emotions? To an extent it is, to a far greater extent, no. Thousands of His followers were swept off their feet by the Nazarene, but only twelve—no, only eleven believed. Thousands since have been carried away by the eloquence.

"But, behind the emotions of Jesus there was a vision that gave him his strength. Behind his resistance to temptation, his miracles of raising the fallen and the dead. Christ's emotions were vital ones and their result was the glorification of the Father.

"But what are man's emotions, by contrast? A husband and wife, childless, go to an orphan asylum to get some little child and make it happy. They see a little boy that is dull; one that is freckle-faced; and then they see a little boy with blue eyes, and flaxen hair; and a pretty loving little girl. They come to put light and happiness into some forlorn home, but they forget that purpose, and are torn in the selfish effort to decide between the two children that will give them some pleasure. So often men start well, but end selfishly.

"Shall our test be humanitarian? Shall we apply it to what one has done for the poor, the outcast, or for the civic conditions of his fellow citizens. This is too humanitarian. There is only one purpose behind it—that of immortality; and that purpose is not right. Such immortality means only one mortal tongue. It is not immortality, but merely repetition.

"What then shall our test be? It is good to build a hospital in the valley but better to build a fence on the precipice. Our test to count must be religion applied before men fall. Then when we feel the love of Christ burning in our hearts, we will be sure we have the right test. Then nothing can lock the gates of our hearts and we know then where our hope is."

EIGHT FIREMEN INJURED IN A FACTORY BLAZE

B. A. Stevens Company Plant at Toledo and Eight Frame Buildings Destroyed By Fire.

Toledo, Ohio, July 24.—Four buildings belonging to the B. A. Stevens company, manufacturers of billiard and pool fixtures and barroom supplies together with eight frame dwellings were destroyed by fire, during which eight firemen were more or less severely injured. The loss is placed at $350,000.

How the fire started is not known. John Friemark, the watchman, going into the planing mill, noticed a small blaze near one of the planes. He immediately turned in an alarm.

The flames spread through the brick buildings with great rapidity. Many of the firemen turned their attention to adjoining structures, but the heat of the blazing factory furnace was too great for them, and one by one the frame buildings were eaten by the fire.

In half a dozen of the frame houses resided negro families, who saved but a small portion of their goods in their haste to escape.

Shortly after the flames spread from one to another of the structures of the B. A. Stevens plant the floors and walls were burned out. The floors gave way, sending up great clouds of sparks, which, in falling on roofs more than two blocks away, kept firemen busy extinguishing new fires.

The walls on the Erie and the Lucas streets sides fell in within an hour after the fire was discovered. Flying brick and glass injured a number of the firemen.

JUAREZ POLICE KILL SOLDIERS

Mexican Insurgents Attack Street Commissioner's House.

Juarez, Mexico, July 24.—One man dead, another fatally wounded and a third shot in two places is the not result of a pitched battle in this city between the city police and insurgent forces.

The beginning of the affray was the result of an argument between Darillo Hernandez and insurrecto soldiers and Dolores Martinez, street commissioner of Juarez, in front of Martinez's residence. When Martinez requested Hernandez to desist from his argument, Hernandez opened fire upon him with a pistol. Martinez ran into his residence, secured a rifle and shot Hernandez through the head, killing him instantly.

Comrades of Hernandez at once climbed to the roof of the garrison building near by and opened a hot fire upon the Martinez residence, which was returned by a detachment of police who had arrived upon the scene.

About fifty shots were fired before General Blanco, who was summoned, was able to quell the disorder.

The town is quiet, but there is much bitter feeling.

NOTES FOR CITY FARMERS ONLY.

(By H. L. RANN.)

The high price of meat is driving many a family to a rice diet. This is well. There is nothing more filling than rice unless it is dried apples and ice water. After a man has lined his stomach with a couple of pounds of Honduras rice, his digestive apparatus will look a porterhouse steak in the face with a cold and stony stare. Rice should always be boiled before serving, as otherwise the hulls are liable to pock through the pores and make a new flannel shirt look like a coffee sieve.

Genevieve wants to know if a luminous mole on the nose is a bar to marriage. It would be with us, but tastes differ. In olden times the mole was considered a badge of honor. Mary, Queen of Scots, wore one on her left ear, and her last words to the headsman were, "Woodman, spare that mole." Sir Walter Raleigh had a mole on his upper lip that looked like a butter bean, but unfortunately, while trying out a new brand of tobacco he set it on fire, and it was consumed to ashes right under his very eyes. The historian Bancroft relates that Lady Raleigh was rejoiced thereat, for she said she would, about as soon kiss a calf with a prong muzzle on as to go up against that birthmark. It was the most poignant sorrow of Lord Byron's life that he could never wear low neck and short sleeves on account of a picture gallery of spotted moles bequeathed by an ancestor who died of the hives.

In filling the icehouse, be careful to pick out a pair of ice tongs with firm teeth. A neighbor of ours was superintending a job of this kind last winter, and was standing directly underneath a chunk of ice that weighed 200 pounds, when the ice tongs emitted a yawn and made his coconnut look like the greatest common divisor. If you have ever had a new stiff hat rammed down over your ears by a block of channel ice, you will know how it feels to be anesthetized by a pile-driver.

Stopping Light Stops Decay

Light starts decay even in pure beer. Dark glass gives protection against light. Schlitz is bottled in a brown bottle to protect its purity from the brewery to your glass.

In the Schlitz Brewery, some say, protection against impurity is carried to an absurd extreme. We don't think so.

We have adopted every idea, every invention to attain and preserve purity.

We scald every tub, keg and barrel—every pipe and pump—every time we use it. We wash every bottle four times by machinery. Even the air in which the beer is cooled is filtered.

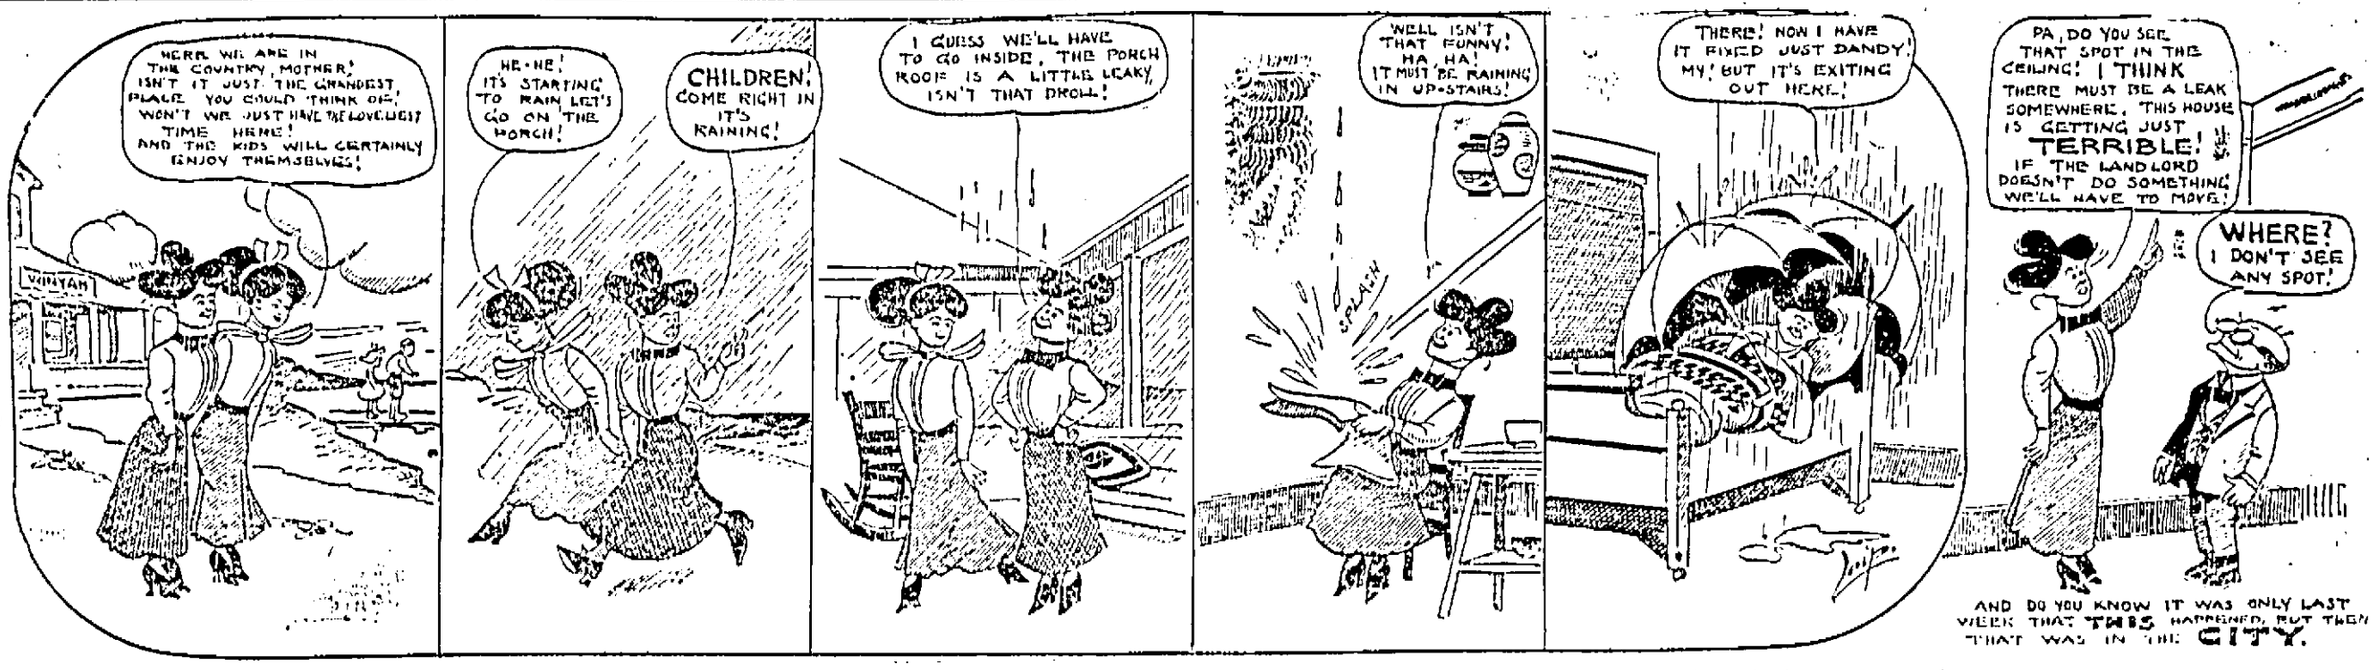

It is aged for months in glass enameled tanks. It cannot cause biliousness. It will not ferment in your stomach.

If you knew what we know about beer, you would say, "Schlitz—Schlitz in Brown Bottles."

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—It is wonderful what a lot of things Mother will stand for when she's in the humor.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

"What was it?" Lidgerwood asked, still dazed and half blinded.

"A man tried to kill you," said Dawson in his most matter of fact tone. "I happened along just in time to joggle his arm. That and your quick drop did the business. Not hurt, are you?"

Lidgerwood was gripping the gate and trying to steady himself. A chill, like a violent attack of ague, was shaking him to the bone.

"No," he returned, mustering the chattering teeth by the supremest effort of will. "Thanks to you, I guess—I'm—not hurt. Who w-was the man?"

"It was Rufford. He followed you from the Crow's Nest. Williams saw him and put me on, so I followed him."

"Williams? Then he isn't"—

"No," said Dawson, anticipating the query. "He is with us, and he is swinging the best of the engineers into line. But come into the house and let me give you a drop of whisky. This thing has got on your nerves a bit—and no wonder."

"Rufford, you said. You mean the discharged telegraph operator?"

"Worse luck," said Dawson. "It was his brother Bart, the lookout at Redlight Sammy's, the fellow they call 'the killer.'"

CHAPTER VIII.

BENSON'S BRIDGE TIMBERS.

It was on the morning following the startling episode at the Dawsons' gate that Benson, lately arrived from the west on train 201, came into the superintendent's office with the light of discovery in his eye. But the discovery was made to wait.

"What's this they were telling me down at the lunch counter just now—about somebody taking a pot shot at you last night?" he asked. "Dougherty said it was Bart Rufford. Was it?"

Lidgerwood confirmed the gossip with a nod. "Yes, it was Rufford, so Dawson says. I didn't recognize him, though. It was too dark."

"Well, I'm mighty glad to see that he didn't get you. What was the row?"

"I don't know definitely. I suppose it was because I told McCloskey to discharge his brother awhile back."

"A pretty close call, wasn't it, or was Dougherty only putting on a few frills to go with my cup of coffee?"

"It was close enough," admitted Lidgerwood, half absently. He was thinking not so much of the narrow escape as of the fresh and humiliating evidence it had afforded of his own wretched unreadiness.

"All right; you'll come around to my way of thinking after awhile. I tell you, Lidgerwood, you've got to heel yourself when you live in a gun country. I said I wouldn't do it, but I have done it, and I'll tell you right now when anybody in this blasted desert makes monkey motions at me I'm going to blow the top of his head off quick."

"Hasn't it ever occurred to you, Jack, that I am the one man in the desert who cannot afford to go armed? I am supposed to stand for law and order. What would my example be worth if it should be noised around that I, too, had become a gun toter?"

"Oh, I'm not going to argue with you," laughed Benson. "But I didn't come up here to wrangle with you about your theoretical notions of law and order. I came to tell you that I have been hunting for those bridge timbers of mine."

"Well," queried Lidgerwood, "have you found them?"

"No, and I don't believe anybody will ever find them."

"But you have discovered something?"

"Partly yes and partly no. I think I told you at the time that they vanished between two days like a puff of smoke, leaving no trace behind them. How it was done I couldn't imagine. There is a wagon road paralleling the river over there at the siding, as you know, and the first thing I did the next morning was to look for wagon tracks. No set of wheels carrying anything as heavy as those 12 by 12 twenty-fours had gone over the road."

"How were they taken then? They couldn't have been floated down the river, could they?"

"It was possible, but not at all probable," said the engineer. "My theory was that they were taken away on somebody's railroad car. There were only two sources of information at first—the night operator at Little Butte, twelve miles west, and the trackwalker at Point of Rocks, whose beat goes down to within two or three miles of the Gloria bridge. Goodloe, at Little Butte, reports that there was nothing moving on the main line after the passing of the midnight freight east, and Shaughnessy, the trackwalker, is just a plain, unvarnished liar. He knows a lot more than he will tell."

"Still, you are looking a good bit more cheerful than you were last week," was Lidgerwood's suggestion.

"Yes. After I got the work started again with a new set of timbers I spent three or four days on the ground digging for information like a dog after a woodchuck. There are some prospectors panning on the bar three miles up the Gloria, but they knew nothing, or if they knew they wouldn't tell. That was the case with every man I talked to on our side of the river. But over across the Timanyoni, nearly opposite the mouth of the Gloria, there is a little creek coming in from the north, and on this creek I found a lone prospector, a queer old chap who hails from my neck of woods up in Michigan."

"Go on," said Lidgerwood when the engineer stopped to light his pipe.

"The old man told me a fairy tale, all right," Benson went on. "He was as full of fancies as a fig is of seeds. I have been trying to believe that what he told me isn't altogether a pipe dream, but it sounds mightily like one. He says that about 2 o'clock in the morning of Saturday, two weeks ago, an engine and a single car backed down from the west to the Gloria bridge and a crowd of men swarmed off the train, loaded those bridge timbers and ran away with them, going back up the line to the west. He tells it all very circumstantially, though he neglected to explain how he happened to be awake and on guard at any such unearthly hour."

"Where was he when he saw all this?"

"On his own side of the river, of course. It was a dark night, and the engine had no headlight. But the loading gang had plenty of lanterns, and he says they made plenty of noise."

"You didn't let it rest at that?" said the superintendent.

"Oh, no, indeed! I put in the entire afternoon that day on a handcar with four of my men to pump it for me, and if there is a foot of the main line, sidetracks or spurs west of the Gloria bridge that I haven't gone over I don't know where it is. The next night I crossed the Timanyoni and tackled the old prospector again. I wanted to check him up—see if he had forgotten any of the little frills and details. He hadn't. On the contrary, he was able to add what seems to me a very important detail. About an hour after the disappearance of the one car train with my bridge timbers he heard something that he had heard many times before. He says it was the high pitched song of a circular saw. I asked him if he was sure. He grinned and said he hadn't been brought up in the Michigan woods without being able to recognize that song wherever he might hear it."

"Whereupon you went hunting for sawmills?" asked Lidgerwood.

"That is just what I did, and if there is one within hearing distance of that old man's cabin on Quartz creek I couldn't find it. But I am confident that there is one and that the thieves, whoever they were, lost no time in sawing my bridge timbers up into board lumber, and I'll bet a hen worth $50 against a no account yellow dog that I have seen those boards a dozen times within the last twenty-four hours without knowing it."

"Didn't see anything of our switch engine while you were looking for your bridge timbers and sawmills and other things, did you?" queried Lidgerwood.

"No," was the quick reply; "no, but I have a think coming on that too. My old prospector says he couldn't make out very well in the dark, but it seemed to him as if the engine which hauled away our bridge timbers didn't have any tender. How does that strike you?"

Lidgerwood grew thoughtful. The missing engine was of the "saddle tank" type, and it had no tender. It was hard to believe that it could be hidden anywhere on so small a part of the Red Butte Western system as that covered by the comparatively short mileage in Timanyoni Park. Yet if it had not been dumped into some deep pot hole in the river it was unquestionably hidden somewhere.

"Benson, are you sure you went over all the line lying west of the Gloria bridge?" he asked pointedly.

"Every foot of it, up one side and down the other. No; hold on. There is that old spur running up on the eastern side of Little Butte. It's the one that used to serve Flemister's mine when the workings were on the eastern slope of the butte. I didn't go over that spur. It hasn't been used for years. As I remember it, the switch connections with the main line have been taken out."

"You're wrong about that," said Lidgerwood definitely. "McCloskey thought so, too, and told me that the frogs and point rails had been taken out at Silver Switch, at both of the main line ends of the Y, but the last time I was over the line I noticed that the old switch stands were there and that the split rails were still in place."

"Say, Lidgerwood, I'm going back to the park on extra 71, which ought to leave in about five minutes," said Benson hurriedly. "Tell me half a dozen things in just about as many seconds. Has Flemister used that spur since you took charge of the road?"

"No."

"Have you ever suspected him of being mixed up in the looting?"

"I haven't known enough about him to form an opinion."

Benson stepped to the door communicating with the outer office and closed it quietly.

"Your man Hallock out there—how is he mixed up with Flemister?"

"I don't know. Why?"

"Because the day before yesterday when I was on the Little Butte station platform talking with Goodloe I saw Flemister and Hallock walking down the new spur together. When they saw me they turned around and began to walk back toward the mine."

"Hallock had business with Flemister—I know that much—and he took half a day off Thursday to go and see him," said the superintendent.

"Do you happen to know what the business was?"

"Yes, I do. He went at my request."

"H'm!" said Benson. "Another string broken. Never mind; I've got to catch that train."

"Still after those bridge timbers?"

"Still after the boards they have probably been sawed into. And before I get back I am going to know what's at the upper end of that old Silver Switch Y spur."

The young engineer had been gone less than half an hour and Lidgerwood had scarcely finished reading his mail when McCloskey opened the door. Like Benson, the trainmaster also had the light of discovery in his eye.

"More thievery," he announced gloomily. "This time they have been looting my department. I had ten or twelve thousand feet of high priced insulated copper wire and a dozen or more telephone sets in the storeroom. The wire and all those telephone sets are gone."

"Well?" said Lidgerwood evenly. The temptation to take it out upon the nearest man was still as strong as ever, but he was growing better able to resist it.

"I've done what I could," snapped McCloskey, seeming to know what was expected of him, "but nobody knows anything, of course. So far as I could find out, no one of my men has had occasion to go to the storeroom for a week."

"Who has the keys?"

"I have one, and Spurlock, the line chief, has one. Hallock has the third."

"Always Hallock!" was the half impatient comment. "I hope you don't suspect him of stealing your wire."

"That's just what I do. I've got him dead to rights this time. He was in that storeroom day before yesterday, or, rather, night before last. Callahan saw him coming out of there."

Lidgerwood sat back in his chair and smiled.

"I don't blame you much, Mac. This thing is getting to be pretty binding upon all of us. But I think you are mistaken—in your conclusion, I mean. Hallock has been making an inventory of material on hand for the past week or more, and now that I think of it I remember having seen your wire and the telephone sets included in his last sheet of telegraph supplies."

"There it goes again," said the trainmaster sourly. "Every time I get a half hitch on that fellow something turns up to make it slip."

"Try to be as fair to him as you can," Lidgerwood advised. "I know you dislike him, and probably you have good reasons. But have you stopped to ask yourself what possible use he could make of the stolen material?"

"I can tell you one thing, Mr. Lidgerwood—Flemister has just put a complete system of wiring and telephones in his mine, and if he had the stuff for the system shipped in over our railroad the agent at Little Butte doesn't know anything about it."

"That proves nothing against Hallock, Mac, as you will see when you cool down a little," he said.

"I know it doesn't," wrathfully. "Nothing proves anything any more. I suppose I've got to say it again—I'm all in, down and out." And he went away, growling to his hat brim.

Late in the evening of the same day Benson returned from the west. He sought out Lidgerwood at once and made his report of the day's doings.

"I have and I haven't," he said, beginning in the midst of things, as his habit was. "You were right about the track connection at Silver Switch. It is in. Flemister put it in himself a month ago, when he had a carload of coal taken up to the back door of his mine."

"Did you go up over the spur?"

"Yes, and I had my trouble for my pains. Before I go any further, Lidgerwood, I'd like to ask you one question—can we afford to quarrel with Mr. Pendington Flemister?"

"I TOLD THEM TO GO STRAIGHT TO BLAZES."

"Benson, we shan't hesitate a single moment to quarrel with the biggest mine owner or freight shipper this side of the Crosswater hills if we have the right on our side. Spread it out. What did you find?"

AUTOMOBILE PLUNGES 75 FEET.

Two Fatally Hurt and Three Others Injured at Cleves, O.

Cincinnati, July 24.—Dr. and Mrs. W. L. Milner of this city, the latter a daughter of Col. C. B. Wing, prominent paper manufacturer, were probably fatally injured at Cleves, O., when their automobile went over a 75-foot embankment on the Graydon road. With Doctor and Mrs. Milner at the time were Mrs. C. B. Wing and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Martin, the latter a daughter of John Havlin, the theatrical magnate. The latter three were seriously but not fatally injured.

The automobile turned over four times before it reached the bottom of the embankment and it appears miraculous that all five of the party were not killed. Doctor and Mrs. Milner sustained several broken ribs, were bruised and cut about the head, and both were internally injured.

An effort is being made to have the young couple come here together and have the ceremony performed at the top of the peak.

Little Bed-Time Tales By EDITH HAVENS

Ruth's Birthday

TOMORROW is your birthday, Ruth. Would you like to invite some of your little friends to tea?" said Mrs. Canton.

Her birthday! Ruth had forgotten all about it.

"Oh, yes," she said, clapping her hands. "What fun it will be," and then she danced all about the room in her joy.

Coax as she would, Ruth couldn't get her mother to tell her just what the party would be like, and she was a very excited little girl when she went to bed that night.

That afternoon, unknown to Ruth, Mrs. Canton had sent out twelve tiny letters to twelve of Ruth's playmates, and they had all been asked to be present at a birthday party at Ruth's house on the following afternoon.

The next day was a beautiful day and Ruth could hardly wait for the afternoon to come.

Her mother would not let her look into the front parlor, and Ruth, almost too happy to speak, wondered and wondered what was going on beyond that closed door.

At two o'clock the little guests began to arrive, and Ruth met each one at the door. They were shown into the sitting room. The parlor door was still closed. Mrs. Canton came into the room, and in a moment the room resounded with laughter and song, for the children began to play games—all kinds of fine games. There was pin the tail on the donkey, which was great fun; "on the green carpet," clap in and clap out, and a lot of others. For over an hour they played, and then Mrs. Canton announced that the children would all go into the parlor.

During the good time Ruth had almost forgotten the parlor, and how she shouted with joy with all the children as the great folding doors were opened.

What do you think?

The parlor had been decorated most beautifully with all kinds of flowers, while in the center of the room there stood the most wonderful white table of good things you ever saw. There was ice cream in pretty shaped molds, candy, nuts, sandwiches, and fruits, while in the center of it all lay a wonderful birthday cake ablaze with candles. There were ten little lights, one for each year of Ruth's life.

What a feast it was!

"I never was so happy in all my life," whispered Ruth to her mother as she was tucked in bed that night.

And then Ruth went to sleep and dreamed it all over again.

New Argument for a Pension.

An old lady called on a lawyer in San Francisco to ask him to have the United States government grant her a pension. She told a sad story of her destitution and added a glowing account of the heroism her husband had displayed in the Civil war.

"As I understand it," said the pension attorney, "you ask for this pension in the name of the valiant services rendered to your country by your husband."

"No," replied the old lady. "I ask it in the name of God and his mercy."

"In that case," said the lawyer, "I'll get you your pension. I have very few applications in that name."—Popular Magazine.

Rostand and the Law.

An American friend of Edmond Rostand says that the great dramatist once told him of a curious encounter he had had with a local magistrate in a town not far from his own.

It appears that Rostand had been asked to register the birth of a friend's newly arrived son. The clerk at the registry office was an officious little chap, bent on carrying out the letter of the law. The following dialogue ensued:

"Your name, sir?"

"Edmond Rostand."

"Vocation?"

"Man of letters and member of the French academy."

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Janesville Gazette, July 24, 1871.

The Meeting Tonight.

The presence of the taxpayers of this city is desired at the old court room, in the Myers Block, at half past seven o'clock this evening. The subject for consideration will be the railroad interests of this city, more particularly, the project for building a line between Janesville and Beloit. As the views of the people at large are wanted on this object, it is hoped that the city will be well represented. Those who engage in the discussion should make their remarks short and to the point, and not uselessly consume the time by irrelevant arguments which only render their hearers impatient without accomplishing and good results, and necessitate adjournment before any conclusion has been reched.

Harry Miller Dead.

The running horse, Harry Miller, which was brought to this city a few days since, to be trained for the four mile and repeat race with "Canada," in September next, died very suddenly yesterday afternoon. The cause of his death is not yet known but a post mortem will throw some light on the matter.

Church Picnic.

The members of Trinity church in this city will hold a picnic at Clear Lake on Thursday of this week. The train will leave the depot at 7:30 a. m. and return at 7:20 p. m.

Horrible.

"Weary, wake up," said Limping Lem, shaking his fellow traveler's shoulder. "Wake up! Wot's de matter wit youse?"

"Huh?" asked Weary, half opening his eyes.

"Wot's de matter wit youse? You been havin' de nightmare?"

"Goo! I guess I did. It was horrible. I was dreamin' dat I was a boy again and me mudder was gittin' ready to give me a bath."

In Time of Need.

"Now, would any one present like the prayers of the congregation?"

"I would be glad to have them."

"Are you about to start on a hazardous journey?"

"Not exactly, but I have just remembered that I forgot to mail a letter my wife gave me, and I know she has found it in my other clothes before now."

"Don't you know why?" responded the other.

"No."

"Gustave once served on the jury in a breach of promise case."
